

to Create a Healthy & Supportive San Diego

About the Bulletin

This issue helps San Diegans understand the health effects of adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) and toxic stress. Learn how ACEs can shape lifelong health—and how you can help protect the next generation.

Shine a Light On: Toxic Stress

Not all stress is bad. But certain types of stress experienced as a child can lead to health problems later in life. Stress becomes toxic for our bodies when it is severe and prolonged.

About 30 years ago, researchers found a connection between adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) and long-term health problems. Experiencing many ACEs without supportive adults can cause toxic stress to build up in children's bodies. Over time, toxic stress can lead to health issues like substance use disorder, depression, anxiety, and even heart disease and diabetes.

ACEs are very common—in fact, two-thirds of US adults have at least one. The good news is that these experiences don't automatically impact our health. We can manage toxic stress and the effects of ACEs with safe, secure, nurturing relationships and environments.

What Is an Adverse Childhood Experience?

An adverse experience that could lead to health problems is more serious than everyday stress. ACEs can include things like:

-ò:-

Systemic issues like racism and poverty can also be an adverse experience—and also make other ACEs worse.

Up2SD.org

San Diego Access & Crisis Line (ACL) 888-724-7240

Community Resources

The ACL is a local 9-8-8 Lifeline Network Partner

Dial 988 to reach the national Suicide & Crisis Lifeline network. Local calls from a San Diego County area code will be rerouted to the ACL 7 days a week /24 hours a day in all languages. Scan the QR code to learn more.

EDITION

Read Up:

Protecting Kids From Toxic Stress

Studies have shown that safe, secure, nurturing relationships and environments (SSNREs) are the best protection from toxic stress. When traumatic events or ongoing sources of stress are balanced by positive relationships with caregivers, children's brains are better able to process stress.

ACEs can be passed down, especially if your parent(s) also experienced ACEs. The good news is that you can still retrain your brain and heal. A professional can guide you and help you learn new behaviors.

How to Create SSNREs for Kids

SSNREs can help protect against tough situations from turning into toxic stress for kids. Any caregiver or adult can help create a safe space. Schools, churches, and the larger community can all help kids too.

Be There

Playing, reading, and talking with kids helps them feel connected with you.

Stay Steady

A steady and dependable routine can help kids better handle unexpected events.

Show Affection

Expressing your love verbally and physically can help kids build resilience.

How to Heal as an Adult

Our past doesn't define us, but it does shape us. It's important to remember that ACEs are not your fault. The first step is to understand how they may be showing up in your life. Then you can start healing.

Learn more at: livebeyondca.org

About It's Up to Us

This bulletin is part of the It's Up to Us campaign, developed through the County of San Diego Health and Human Services Agency, and supports the County's Live Well San Diego vision to promote a community that is healthy, safe, and thriving. By raising awareness, encouraging dialogue, and providing access to local resources, we aim to inspire wellness, reduce stigma, and prevent suicide in all San Diegans, particularly focusing on San Diego's hardest hit and most at-risk populations.

Sources

Kerker, B. D., Zhang, J., Nadeem, E., Stein, R. E., Hurlburt, M. S., Heneghan, A., Landsverk, J., & McCue Horwitz, S. (2015). Adverse childhood experiences and mental health, chronic medical conditions, and development in young children. Academic Pediatrics, 15(5), 510–517. bit.ly/3ASxEmK

Harvard University Center on the Developing Child. (n.d.). A guide to toxic stress. bit.ly/493YHbE Cleveland Clinic. (2023, April 4). Adverse childhood experiences (ACEs). bit.ly/3AQnNhn

ACEs Aware. (n.d.). The science of ACEs & toxic stress. bit.ly/3ASmkHm

Up2SD.org

San Diego Access & Crisis Line (ACL) 888-724-7240

Community Resources

The ACL is a local 9-8-8 Lifeline Network Partner

Dial 988 to reach the national Suicide & Crisis Lifeline network. Local calls from a San Diego County area code will be rerouted to the ACL 7 days a week/24 hours a day in all languages. Scan the QR code to learn more.

